Here's my comment on frequency of posts

I'd like to see one more post a week - perhaps a roundup of interesting library tech bits? more would be nice

This one is just right.

I love getting the tech bits posts and have a folder in my email that they go right into. The posts are very helpful and I love the range of topics. I really like learning more about tools that can help me do my job better, reach more people, teens, etc.

I like the posts so I wouldn't mind more frequent additions, but as a former blogger myself, I know how tough it can be to crank out the articles.

Just right. Maybe once a we ...

Comments about length

Here's my comment on post length Perfect. Perfect. Don't change! just right Perfect length.
 Perfect! Love that they are usually 2-3 paragraphs.
 I think they're about right for the types of articles you're presenting. Just right.
 Same as for frequency. I read them.
 I think length has to depend on topic and so some of them have been short and some longer. Just right
 Good. They are a great length. It an easy quick way to hear about something new. Just right.
 They are mostly spot on.
 Not too long, as time is always a consideration. You could add links (if applicable) for more info.

Comments about readability

Here's my comment on Readability... very clear This one is just right. Great for my level of understanding.
 I don't consider myself a techno-geek, yet I can understand the content, so readability is at a great level for me.
 Haven't had any problems reading them.
 Depends on topic; occasionally not technical enough, but I understand the readership has a wide range of expertise.
 Again the topic makes somewhat of a difference but I think they have been OK. Great
 If I can understand them then they are ok!
 The are perfect! They always tell you what you need to know, what it will do for you to make your lif ...

Comments about relevance

Here's my comment on Relevance
 Mostly helpful tech suggestions, but quite a few that I've come across already.
 I find that the info is relevant to both my working and non working life. Since some information may be more relevant to others in my family, I save most of the articles or forward them on.

Relevancy varies depending on the post, but it's all good!
Yes, of course its relevant, sometimes its repetitive, but review is good.
Relevant to my job, to my life, and I have saved some posts for others who can use certain tools for research and other needs.
Some very relevant and useful, oth ...

Just a few more questions...

What was your favorite TechBits post? Why?

Any one with an embedded video
I can't name any one article, but I do enjoy the ones that deal with "reference" types of things. The fun, spare time, net surfing kinds of things. I do, however, find the more technical articles interesting as well and appreciate the clear, concise instructions given.
There were so many! I like best the info about little apps or things like Lazarus, etc/ cool tools such as Zamzar Laptop vs. Mini Laptop featuring our star Dan Jacobson!
I can't do favorites. I've forwarded at least two dozen to other non-library people tho.
The Thanks for Daily Tools post - many ...

Are there any topics you'd like us to cover? Questions you'd like us to answer?

Email digests (I heard Mark wants someone to write about this, what they do and how to sign up) shortcuts and time savers, technology changes, and hardware updates, any web sites that offer data manipulation such as online editors, cool tools
Okay, I'm super-curious about Google Wave. I'm hoping to be able to get up to speed as soon as it becomes widely available. I know that right now it's invitation only. If you have words of wisdom about the potential ramifications of this new tool, I'd love to hear it. I've viewed the short Wave videos on You Tube.

I think you strike a nice balance with topic choice, length of post, and frequency. Too many more and I would be overwhelmed so not read any. Nice job!
great job Keep it going--it's really convenient. Can I subscribe after I retire?
Thanks for keeping us all up to speed. My partner works for State Gov. and they could definitely use these tools for long distance collaborative planning and more, but they don't have folks like you teaching them how to use web 2.0 to their benefit. Kudos!! "applause, applause"
I'm sorry I don't have more specific comments other than: I like it! Thanks, keep ...
